This course uses an intensive design studio format to guide students through development of a graduate social work course dedicated to the intersections of social work and critical pedagogy. Each student will create and refine their own syllabus while identifying core topics and structures that will inform the development of a foundational social work course to be piloted in Fall 2021. In doing so, they will explore fundamental educational design practices while reviewing discipline-specific practices, texts, and research methods. This course is ideal for PhD students who would like to develop a syllabus for a teaching portfolio and second year MSW students interested in pursuing a PhD, but any MSW student interested in the topic is welcome.

The course blends synchronous and asynchronous work in Zoom and D2L. Class times: Fri., 3/12; Sat., 3/13; Sun., 3/14; Fri, 4/16 – 10am to 3pm

REGISTER NOW

SW 891-003: Social Work and Critical Pedagogy: A Collaborative Curricular Design Studio
1 credit
Spring 2021